12.2 Real Estate Investment Trusts

Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) are publicly traded companies that invest directly or indirectly in real estate. REITs are entities organized as joint-stock companies that provide financing for various types of real estate or pool capital from multiple investors for the acquisition of desired properties.

As an investment instrument, REITs combine the best features of real estate and securities investments, offering a professionally managed, efficient, and reliable investment vehicle in a portfolio. REITs emerged as a financial investment tool following a decision by the U.S. Congress in 1960. In the 1970s, they gained popularity as a new investment instrument providing significant advantages in the U.S. capital markets.

There are three types of REITs. The first type is established for a specific project; the second type is created to invest in specific areas, either for a fixed term or indefinitely; and the third type is formed without restrictions on objectives or establishment duration. REITs established in Türkiye generally fall into the third type. REITs, which are widespread in Europe and the Far East, are investor companies that provide financing to the real estate sector.

Real Estate Investment Trusts ("REITs") were first established in Türkiye in 1995. In 1997, they went public and were listed on Borsa İstanbul (BIST) in accordance with the regulations of the Capital Markets Board (CMB). Under the CMB regulations, real estate investment trusts (REITs) operating in the capital markets are required to apply to the Board to offer at least 25% of their shares to the public within a maximum of 3 months from their establishment date, starting from January 1, 2010, due to changes in the applicable legislation. As per the legal regulations they are subject to, REITs are corporate entities where transparency and accountability principles apply. Currently, there are 48 real estate investment trusts listed on Borsa İstanbul (BIST) operating in Türkiye.

The fact that REITs are publicly traded companies brings significant advantages both for the sector and investors. Companies in the sector enhance their financing opportunities by going public, which allows them to develop extensive real estate projects. Investors, on the other hand, indirectly participate in projects they could not undertake with their individual savings by owning shares in REIT companies.

With the enactment of Law No. 7524, "Law on Amendments to Tax Laws and Certain Laws and Decree Law No. 375," published in the Official Gazette on August 2, 2024, the application of corporate tax exemption for Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) and Real Estate Investment Funds (REIFs) is now conditional. Specifically, the exemption will only apply if at least 50% of the profits derived from the real estate owned by these funds and trusts are distributed as dividends by the end of the second month following the month in which the corporate tax return is due; subparagraph c added to Article 32 of the Corporate Tax Law introduces a 10% domestic minimum corporate tax and stipulates that REITs' and REIFs' earnings from immovable properties cannot be taken into account as exemption and discount from the corporate income to be calculated as minimum corporate tax.

Although the REIT sector is relatively new in our country, the tax incentives provided by the government have led to a significant inflow of corporate capital into the sector. This has been notably supported by the strong investment habits of the Turkish public, where real estate holds a significant place. REITs, due to their corporate structures, exemplify accountability, reliability, transparency, and auditability, representing a model of corporate governance.

The increasing demand in the real estate sector, the need for corporate capital to meet this demand, and the ability of REITs to allow small investors to engage in real estate investments with modest amounts have all contributed to the entry of new REITs into the sector, either as new establishments or through transformations.

The REIT Index ("XGMYO"), which consists of 50 real estate investment trusts with a market capitalization of approximately TL 578 billion, closed the year 2024 at a level of 3,578,5.

12.1 STOCK PERFORMANCE (“PEKGY.E”)
